I have a great idea on how we can dispose of toxic waste. Just fill up your tank truck. Have a solenoid valve with a dash mounted on/off switch. Now about 2:00AM head up north, say to Rosseau Ontario and when your about a few miles out of town heading west on Highway 141, flip your dash mounted switch and let your load of waste spill onto the pavement below you. It works and nobody will say a dam thing. You can see a clear cut example of this effective disposal method for yourself. It starts just east of Turtle Lake road on highway 141 and goes for about 4 kilometres till all whatever they dumped was gone. I don't know who did it or what it is. From my experience it is obviously not water soluble as the stained asphalt is still stained after several heavy rains. My guess it has solvent properties as it soaked into the asphalt.

I phoned the Ministry of Environment to report it. I doubt that anything happened. Not very likely anybody did any investigation at all.

So very sad!

Yours in dismay,
